Some of our customers who will have these are hobbyist, students, arts/crafts artists and watch repairers.

• "Steampunk" Jewellery, made with watch parts.

The concept of Steampunk was fashioned in the late 1980s, initially inspired through writing, namely science fiction, but has transcended into other genres such as art, gaming, film, music and fashion. Its look focuses around a post-industrial revolution time but before the mainstream use of electricity; primarily using mechanical symbols.

Steampunk fashion incorporates Victorian-esque trends, such as petticoats, corsets, coats with vests, etc. In recent years this has branched off to jewellery and horology, such as a sculpture by the artist Tim Wetherell in 2009 called 'Clockwork Universe' making one of the first working Steampunk styled timepieces of that scale and hence bringing this branch of chic fashion to the mainstream.
